

Monuments of Seville

Seville, Monumental City

It is a city of cities, a synthesis of the world, it is what is seen and what is not seen. It is its monuments and its parks and gardens, a city that embraces the river to open up to an unfathomable landscape. From the Cathedral to the Setas, from the Cartuja Monastery to the Casa de Pilatos, from the Antiquarium to the Palacio de Dueñas, its streets and squares are a trail of culture, heritage, history and good stories. Explore them, discover them and if you want more, find it at www.visitasevilla.es.

Plaza de España - Parque M^aLuisa

64

The Plaza de España is an emblematic monument of the city, designed by the architect Aníbal González. Made of brick and beautiful ceramic panels was made as a palace square of 50.000m2. It was the headquarters of the Latin American Exhibition of 1929. Really a must of Seville together with Maria Luisa Park, that counts with an area of 340,000 m2. This park has a great botanical value due to the different plant species living in it. Also highly recommended, the magnificent Plaza de América.

Monasterio Cartuja- Centro andaluz de arte Contemporáneo - CAAC

In 1400 the La Cartuja Monastery (Monasterio de la Cartuja) in honour of Santa María de las Cuevas was founded. After 1835, the building lost its religious character and was sold to the English industrialist Charles Pickman who established a pottery and porcelain factory. During Expo 92, it was used as the Royal Pavilion. It currently houses the Centro Andaluz de Arte Contemporáneo, contemporary art museum.

Museo Arqueológico

67

A journey through the civilizations of Seville. The Archaeological Museum of Seville has its origins in the late nineteenth century, when a public collection of antiquities was created, most of them extracted from the Roman city Itálica. In the twentieth century it is consolidated and expanded with the transfer from the old Convent of La Merced to its current headquarters: the Fine Arts pavilion, created by Aníbal González.
